An Estate Planning Story

Twas the night before New Years, when all through the house, Mom and Dad lie awake thinking of their kids and their spouse.

Their wills were both drafted by the attorney with care. With hope that they would be signed before the end of the year.

The dependents were nestled all snug in their beds. But what would happen to them if Mom and Dad were both dead? The power of attorney lies waiting, the living will, too. But still they delay wondering, "What's the right thing to do?"

The plan was drafted by the attorney with skill and great pride. So why did Mom and Dad just set it aside?

Your loved ones are waiting, the attorney is too. But still the plan needs to be read and reviewed.

Another year's gone and things are not done. "You're not getting any younger," reminded their son. If only you had started earlier in the year, rather than watching the game and drinking a beer.

Make it your new year's resolution to take care of your kin. This stuff is important, I'll remind you again. I hope you'll indulge me as I wrap up my rhyme, but I want you to get moving before you run out of time.

The holiday's upon us and I'll end my poem right. Happy New Year to all and to all a good night!
